Postage stamps have been around since the eighteenth century, more than 200 years later they are still around but aren't used as much as they were and are now more of a collection/collector's item because of the historical value different stamps carry. "Voetsek, those that came by boat must go back by boat" is one of the statements said by an Economic Freedom Fighter Student Council (EFFSC) member. The said statement is motivated by the Land expropriation without compensation program that various South African political parties are involved in and that is currently very topical.
