As a self-taught artist, practice explores illustrative realism, naïve art, and aestheticism. They are deeply interested in pushing their artistic abilities, experimenting with diverse mediums, and maintaining a playful approach to their work. Their art often revolves around singular subjects, wordplay, and explorations in sketchbooks, aiming to capture simple concepts of visual aesthetics or convey internal visions. While their primary medium is paint, they also enjoy extending their visual expressions to ceramics. Looking forward, they are eager to delve into mixed media on larger canvases, seeking to work more expansively and freely across a variety of mediums.
