

IMPLORING A VISION

This depicts a man imploring for a vision. In the Lakota tradition, one has to beg for a vision, a glimpse into what he should do. Or an ancestral voice guiding him through hard times. Even though prayer is deep, it can be joyful. And comes in with bliss when fullfield. I spray-painted the back ground, creating this sky-line, sun set looking environment. For the character, I used black ink, painted in thin furrows.

May our wildest prayers be heard.
